Dear Campus Community:

As noted earlier, the search for the next President of Truman State University is underway. To support this important effort, we have retained the global executive search and leadership advisory firm WittKieffer. Our search consultants Christine Pendleton and Sandra Chu will be on campus hosting listening sessions on November 4th and 5th. This is an opportunity for our consultants to hear from the Truman State University community.

We are hosting listening sessions for faculty, staff, and students and invite you to join us during the times below:

Wednesday, November 4
1:15-2:15 p.m.	Staff	Violette Hall 1000
2:30-4:00 p.m.	Faculty	Violette Hall 1000
5:00-6:00 p.m.	Students	Violette Hall 1010

While we welcome any insights you wish to share, below are the questions the search consultants will pose:

- What are the most important opportunities and the greatest challenges your next President will face, and how will you judge that individual's success?
- What experience, credentials, skills, and personal qualities do you seek in the next President that will address the challenges and opportunities Truman State University faces?
- Why should someone want to be the President at this moment in time and at Truman State University?

If you are unable to attend your session, you can still provide input into the process by completing this brief survey. You can also nominate candidates or send inquiries or comments to the WittKieffer team by emailing them at Truman-President@wittkieffer.com.

Your input is very valuable as we begin this most important task for the future of Truman State University. Thank you in advance for your thoughtful participation.
